Dear Mr Hajek,

I write further to your request to determine Teesside University's legal and constitutional basis.

Teesside University is a creature of an Act of UK Parliament being established under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992.

Its key constitutional documents are its Instrument of Government and Articles of Government which are available to download from the Universities website https://www.tees.ac.uk/sections/about/public\_information/copyright.cfm?display=charitable

These two documents set out its establishment and constitutional basis.

The University's Regulator as with all UK Universities is the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) and for quality, the Quality Assurance Agency (QAA).

Either of these two organisations could, if requested, provide further confirmation that Teesside University is a recognised UK Higher Education Institution.

Yours sincerely

Gary Singh
